

We have helped finance the construction of roads, sewage facilities, water facilities, and public buildings for decades.

We have extensive experience in representing both the private sector and governmental entities.

We work with our clients to shape the project as well as structure the financing.

Jackson Kelly's Public Finance industry group is well known throughout the region and is one of the leading finance practices in West Virginia. From economic development projects to transportation infrastructure to healthcare facilities, the attorneys in this industry group structure solutions to finance critical projects for clients such as state and local governments, municipalities, public service districts, universities, banks, underwriters, developers, and not-for-profits.

These attorneys have decades of experience as bond counsel and routinely serve as underwriter's counsel, issuer's counsel, trustee's counsel, lender's counsel, counsel to the letter of credit bank, and user/borrower's counsel. Our attorneys work across all Jackson Kelly offices to provide clients with accessible and responsive service. We have also used our experience to navigate our clients through complex public-private partnerships.

The Public Finance industry group has experience working on tax-exempt and taxable financing for:

- Power, water, and sewer utilities
- Public buildings
- Transportation projects
- Hospitals and medical-related facilities
- Economic development projects
- Higher education facilities
- Athletic stadiums
- Roads