Indiana is known as the “Crossroads of America,” making it well situated to serve the needs of companies in the Indiana-Kentucky-Illinois region and beyond. Recognizing the benefits of an Indiana location, Jackson Kelly established its Evansville office in 2011 to better meet the needs of its energy clients. In 2014, the Firm merged with Rudolph Fine Porter & Johnson, an Evansville firm founded in 1987. This means the Evansville office enjoys the benefits of both strong local roots and Jackson Kelly’s broader regional network ties.

The Evansville attorneys routinely represent clients in litigation, mediation, estate planning and administration, corporate, healthcare, banking, government, intellectual property, employment, and real estate across a host of industries. The Evansville office is also home to Lockyear Title, a full-service provider in title and closing services.
