Alexis L. Hailpern is Counsel in the Financial Services, Banking, and Construction industry groups, focusing primarily on commercial transactions, commercial litigation, and tax controversy. She practices out of the Firm's office in Denver, Colorado.

Alexis represents clients on a wide range of issues, including handling complex construction matters, complex tax controversy matters, commercial loans, and drafting of commercial transaction documents. She is a member of the Firm's Diversity and Inclusion Committee.

Alexis is also Counsel to the Firm's bankruptcy practice. Adding Alexis' tax controversy knowledge to the Firm's bankruptcy practice uniquely positions Jackson Kelly to be able to counsel its clients on tax liabilities before, during, and after bankruptcy proceedings.

One of Alexis' greatest passions is serving not-for-profit organizations as an advisor, attorney, and occasional board member. She has helped countless not-for-profit organizations in the areas of formation, obtaining not-for-profit status with the IRS, fundraising, and tax compliance.

Alexis is a proud Coloradan as she can trace her family roots back to when Colorado was Kansas Territory. As a 5th generation Denverite, Alexis loves everything that Colorado has to offer. She enjoys community service, reading, golf, spending time in the Rocky Mountains, keeping track of the Supreme Court, and, of course, being with her family.
