Patrick F. Estill is a Member in the Construction industry and Business Law group, practicing out of the Firm's office in Lexington, Kentucky.

Patrick focuses his practice on construction and business law. He has a wide array of experience in construction transactions, drafting and negotiating contracts and other project-related documents for owners, contractors, and consultants and routinely advising on risk-allocation in projects. He also has extensive experience in procurement matters, including under Kentucky's public-private partnership laws. Additionally, Patrick has extensive experience in business litigation and commercial law matters. Patrick uses his multidisciplinary experience to better serve clients' interests and solve legal problems in the most efficient way possible. He particularly enjoys drawing on his litigation experience to draft better contracts and guard against risk for construction and other business clients. He also enjoys learning a client's business so that he can deliver valued advice that truly reflects and furthers his clients' goals.

Patrick lives in Lexington with his wife, son, and their two dogs. He enjoys traveling, cooking, music, basketball and soccer, and spending time with his family.
